College of Coastal Georgia Welcomes New Faculty

"There is tremendous excitement on campus with the return of the students, the construction progress, and the addition of 20 faculty members to deliver our academic mission," said Dr. Hepburn. "The quality of our faculty enables us to move forward with our new baccalaureate programs. We are thrilled to be welcoming these new team members."

John Gyllin Joins Coastal Georgia

As the new Vice President of Advancement for the College of Coastal Georgia and Executive Director for the College Foundation, John Gyllin knows what his top priority will be for the remainder of 2010: assuring that the Foundation achieves their goal of raising $1.1 million by year end.

That money benefits students of the College by providing scholarships, faculty support, outreach activities, expanded educational programs, capital and technology improvements for both the Brunswick and Camden campus.

Pedestrian Walk Plaza Construction Update

Crossing between the east and west sides of campus became easier this week when a temporary pedestrian walkway opened Monday, connecting the Library and Administration Building. According to Greg Carver, Business Affairs Office, a walkway will be maintained across the mall, subject to shifting north or south as construction progresses. The plaza remains on schedule for completion by December 10.

UGA President Visits Campus

According to Dr. Michael F. Adams, President of the University of Georgia, people are losing sight of the importance of higher education for the public good, not just the private good.

In remarks September 3 on the College of Coastal Georgia campus, Dr. Adams noted that the UGA founding charter was premised on the assumption that a government only does well when its citizenry is educated. Education - then and now - is fundamental to making sound decisions that benefit society as a whole, not just an elite few, he asserts.

Southern Storytellers Comes to Campus

Dick Yarborough

Oct. 7, 2010

"Why Ray Charles Never Sang 'Ohio on My Mind'...and other important facts about the South"

Humor columnist Dick "I don't make this stuff up" Yarborough is the inaugural storyteller for a new series of entertaining presentations open to the community. Yarborough, whose column appears regularly in The Brunswick News and Georgia Trend magazine, takes the Southeast Georgia Conference Center stage Thursday, October 7, at 5:30 p.m.

The $25 tickets for the event, available through the Advancement Office, include a cocktail reception following Yarborough's presentation. Proceeds benefit the College Foundation Annual Fund.

More Than Textbooks, Paper and Pens

The new, expanded campus bookstore is not only the primary resource for course materials and study aids, but now also for sportswear and other items touting the new College logo at prices to fit students' budgets.

Shoppers will find sets of Mariner sails on a variety of shorts, shirts, athletic gear, caps, water bottles and notebooks. For portability, options range from wheeled back packs to lightweight book bags. There's also a selection of colorful, reusable shopping totes and eye-popping file folders in hues neither manila nor vanilla.

Displays include flash cards, index cards, and value-priced seasonal and all-occasion greeting cards at only 50 cents each. Unexpected rain showers can be countered by popping in to the bookstore to purchase an umbrella. From Tylenol® to tanning lotions, snacks to toy Teddy bears dressed in nursing attire, the bookstore shelves brim with the whimsical as well as the practical - well worth a wander across campus to Andrews Hall to catch the weekly sales specials.
